The Invaders in Cuba-

The official confirmation of the news of the arrival of General Shafter's command off Santiago on Monday, relieved the strain of the war situation, or rather the anxiety of the public, materially. Coupled with this news that of the resumption of cable communications, which will enable the government to keep in closer touch with future events at the scene of activity in the immediate future, and to learn more promptly of operations by the army, was second in importance.

In all probability the troops have already all been landed, and within a few days we shall hear good reports from Uncle Sam's forces. From what is known of the situation the mission of the land forces is likely to be accomplished without unnecessary delay, and, in the meantime, the public, fully appreciative of the task before the combined military and naval commands, will be content to await news with a reasonable decree Orders already issued for further transportation of troops to Santiago indicate the aggressiveness with which operations will be pushed. In the meantime, we are assured that the stars and stripes are floating over Cuban soil, and will remain there until the purpose of the war is accomplished.

The Philippine Orders.

The order of the war department, by direction of the President, constituting the forces sent to Manila an army corns with General Merritt, in command, and empowering him to transfer the command to the next officer in rank, in his own discretion, whenever he deems it necessary to be free to devote his attention to important matters of government connected with the Philippine islands. does not justify the extravagant construction placed upon it by some gensa-The idea that this is to be taken as an indication that the government is to adopt a policy of "imperialism." as the evening paper here has it, is unwarranted. It undoubtedly means, however, that the United States expects to hold possession of the Philippines until the final disposition of them under whatever terms of peace are determined In the meantline, it would be strange, indeed, if a military government, with the American commander at the head, were not maintained. The policy concerning the future of the Philippines is yet to be determined. Violent assumptions concerning the President's policy at this timeby the sensational press are unwarranted by any official act or utterance, whatever may be the developments of the future, now a matter of speculation, but always a matter for grave consideration.

Some Early History.

In this morning's Intelligencer will be found an interesting contribution from the pen of Mr. Hu Maxwell, so well known to the readers of the paper. The article relates to a vaguely understood phase of early West Virginia historythe district of West Augusta, Mr. Maxwell, who is a student of Virginia and West Virginia history, and has written much on that subject, modestly remarks in a private note to the Intelligencer. accompanying the present brief article, that he "may not have succeeded in making it very interesting," but that he believes that he has "brought forward a few facts which no one else ever discovered." Barring the remark about it being an uninteresting article, the writer is correct.

Mr. Maxwell has contributed something concerning the early history of the state, particularly the northern portion, which has not been thoroughly understood by the later generations, and which will do good among people who are inclined to investigate. There are no details, but there is sufficient to give the younger West Virginians is one for the searching out of a most interesting phase of our early history.

In Vairness to all.

In its capacity as a political newspaper, advocating the principles of the Republican party, and the election of candidates pledged to these principles, and desiring to see all aspirants for honors at the hands of the party fairly and justly treated, the Intelligencer is, as in the past, willing that its columns may be used to a reasonable extent by those desiring to present the claims of favortte candidates for positions within the gift of the party.

It is worthy of any man's ambition to aspire to high position, or to any office in the public service. It is natural for his friends to desire to aid him to the attainment of that ambition, and to present his claims, or to add their testimonies of his worth to those of others through the medium of the press! It is also proper for them to do so. The Intelligencer feels sure that good Republicans will appreciate the fact that when it expresses its desire to give the claims of all those who are candidates for nominations to office a fair show, as a party paper, it does so with a sincere desire for the party welfare.

One of the duties of a party paper is to avoid in any way permitting the use of its columns for the purpose of venting personal feelings in ante-convention contests. True, the merits of men offering themselves for honors are proper subjects of discussion, but the claims of a favorite candidate should be urged without personal reflection upon other candidates. It does not aid the cause of the favorite of a writer to discredit his opponent or to abuse him personally. Reflections upon his private character and a too hasty and inconsiderate belief of unjust criticisms can but increase the bitterness of a contest, and are not conducive to the harmony of party councils, Such a course gives aid and comfort to the enemy and breeds feeling that endangers success at the polls-a danger that no Republican desires to court, not especially on account of the candidate himself, but on account of what defeat for Republican principles may mean in a year when their success is of vital importance to the country.

The Intelligencer is moved to say these things in view of communications it has received in the interests of political candidates, and which are confined more generally to reflections upon the rival candidates than to extolling the merits of the writers' particular favorites. The Intelligencer cannot publish articles reflecting upon the personal integrity of citizens, or which are calculated to disturb the good feeling which should exist in a contest between men for political honors. It is willing to publish communications setting forth the claims and merits of candidates, but it will not open its columns to the venting of personal grievances or the indulgence in reflections upon individuals who are asking for recognition by the party, where those individuals are citizens of standing and integrity.

Let all who desire to urge the claims of those whom they advocate for party honors do so. The Intelligencer follows this policy in fairness to all those who aspire to position. Criticism of public acts, when based on facts, are proper, but the line, so far as this paper is concerned, will be drawn at personalities.

The Real Invasion.

statement made by Secretary of War Alger concerning the intention to send an impatient Pennsylvania regiment to Cuba "when the invasion of Cuba takes place," is regarded as significant of the fact that the expedition of the troops under General Shafter to Santlago is not regarded by the govforce. It is an invasion, of course, and is a formidable one, which will doubtless accomplish splendid service, but it is not the movement which is to end military operations.

There are reasons, logical and wisg. that the principal invasion, which will be on a large scale, will not be at once, and which are being accepted as wise by the general public, now that the facts are known. Some time since General Miles and other high military authorities were quoted as being opposed to sending a great volunteer army, such as would be necessary to besiege and take Havana, during the summer season, on the ground that the climate would be more disastrous to such an army than a superior force of Spanlards would be.

The wisdom of the course which is now being pursued is sustained by all who are held to be competent authoritles on the climatic conditions in Cuba including General Lee, Gomez, the insurgent leader, and many others. The statement attributed to the surgeon general of the army that there would be no danger in sending the great army of invasion during this season to Cuba to make the decisive movement on Havana, never was made by him. An official letter to the war department from the surgeon general himself expresses just the opposite view. He shows that between the first of May and the first of November, yellow fever is most preva-lent in the vicinity of Havana, and the result is always an epidemic among unprotected persons. This, he says, produces a mortality of from twenty forty per cent among victims to the fever. To send an army of from forty to fifty thousand American volunteers, most of them unacelimated and unseasoned, in such a season, would be sending it to face a danger more terrible and more fatal than would be faced in

With the development of these facts comes the sober second thought of those who have been crying "On to Havana," The course being pursued is to capture the Cuban ports, cut off all means of supplies, arm the Cubans, and to prosecute land operations with the immunes. the regulars and insurgents. In the meantime the forces to constitute the main army of invasion are being armed, organized, drilled, disciplined, seasoned and generally prepared for the vigorous campaign shead. No time is being lost in these respects, and every advantage to be gained will be with the United States, while Spain's condition grows steadily worse at home and at the seats of war.

Blanco's Methods

If Spain counts her boasted honor as worth anything in the eyes of civilized nations she had better recall Blanco from Cuba, providing, of course, he is able to get out, and send some one who has some appreciation of the rules and customs of civilized warfare. The captain general at Havana hasn't been quite so brutal in his policy as was Weyler, perhaps, but in one or two instances recently he has shown himself to be totally void of the principles which govern honorable commanders in One evidence of Blanco's thirteenth century method of establishing rules of war in the light of the civilization of the present age is his notification to the American fleet that he will hereafter recognize no flag of truce, and that all vessels would be fired upon within a range of six miles of the coast, no matter whether they carried the stars and stripes or a truce signal. While this is not regarded as a matter over which the United States need exhibit any anxiety, it is taken as another evidence of the supreme disregard of civilized methods of warfare, as exhibited by the Spanish commanders on both land and sea. It is in keeping with the act of the Spanish warship during the battle of Manila in displaying a token of surrender and then firing upon the American sallors who were sent to take possession of the vessel. For that treacherous act Dewey promptly sent the Spanish ship to the bottom of the sea. This latest performance of Blanco, is one of the many instances which go to show the character of the enemy. The same lack of regard for a civilized course permentes the entire Spanish army and navy. It is giving the United States no especial concern, for ft will not alter the result of the war, but it should give the Spanish government concern, for it but adds to the reckoning that is being laid up against Spain, and is contributing nothing to the sympathy she is praying for to the European powers.

Here's success to the Cuban navy. It is not a very formidible affair, to be sure, consisting of but one naptha sloop but fifty feet long, and carrying a crew of eight men, but it is the nucleus of the coming navy of the Cuben republic of the near future. May its flag never be dishonored.

WAR'S GREATEST LESSON.

Is Has Shown the Evil Effects of Dissipation Among Young Men. Detroit Free Press: The percentage of volunteers who are rejected by the surgeons ranges from 10 to 20 per cent. At Island Lake on Wednesday 700 men were examined and only 80 per cent were accepted. Considering that the candidates for enlistment are mostly men, and that they have been able to come up to the physical requirements come up to the physical requirements in the national guard, this is a discouragingly large proportion of intapables. From other state camps the report comes that disqualification is due in the majority of cases to heart weakness, attributable generally to eigarette smoking and not infrequently to excessive bicycle riding. The young men who belong to our militia are so circumstanced in life that there is scarcely any excuse for serious physical disacumstanced in the that there is science-ly any excuse for serious physical disa-bility. They are comfortably housed, well fed and adequately clothed. Of rec-reations and fresh air they have an abundance. They have only their own immoderateness in the use of tobacco or they then they have some that they have an the wheel or excesses of other kinds to blame for their failure to go to the front with their fellows.

It is a safe guess that many of the young men who get into the service have more luxuries and more license than is good for their physical well behave more luxuries and more license than is good for their physical well being. Once under strict military discipline they will realize the wholesome results of simple fare, regular habits and systematic exercise. It is regrettable that any of our young men must have to go to war to learn the value of these simple rules of living—the inestimable advantage of a self-restrained and well-ordered life.

As for these who have been set uside by the examiners, their rejection will be worth more than two years in the service to them if the humiliating and disappointing experience impels them to overcome the cause of their disability, if it is within their power to do so. The youth who controls his own spirit in all matters affecting his moral and physical welfare is greater than he that taketh Havana. Can Our Coast be Effectually Blockaded!

Can Our Coast be Effectually Blockaded!

If confidence can be felt in the opinion of military and naval officers in high places at the seat of government, such is the vast extent of our sen coast to blockade it effectually, even if our navy and sea coast defences could offer no adequate resistance, seems to be impossible. When a blockade of the bowels exists, relieve constipation with Hostetter's Stomuch Bitters; which conquers dyspepsia, malaria, rheumatism and kidney trouble.
